

The title "Restoring Internet Freedom" is a label designed to mislead the inattentive as to the true goals of this action.

The state of the internet today is equal, all points on the web are treated with the same status.

This action wants to take away that equality and twist it into power and influence for big-money interests.

When content providers and internet access providers are really one in the same they will, of course, use powers enabled by this action to decide winners and losers.

Start-up efforts would essentially be quashed before they ever have a chance to develop and grow.

Competition among those providing internet and content services is further eroded.

These actions would affect more than just economic and entertainment interests.

It is not difficult to imagine these new found powers being used to influence main stream news dissemination and political discourse.

This short set of circumstances described here should be more than enough to convince anyone that...

THE INTERNET NEEDS TO REMAIN NEUTRAL!